

Danielle Kaynor

Danielle brings a big dose of passion, energy & curiosity to her work as an Innovationist as well as 20 years of hands on experience designing and leading innovation programs for global clients.

Over the course of her career, she has enjoyed collaborating with a wide range of clients – from CPG to food to high-tech to building materials, from Fortune 100 to start-ups to non-profits. She has a special interest in providing an “external lens” to her client engagements, bringing diverse perspectives and analogous worlds to bear on innovation challenges. Based upon the new insights and connections that are made, clients uncover unmet needs, imagine future possibilities and discover and embrace opportunities previously unimaginable to them. Danielle serves on the board of the Association for Managers of Innovation, a non-profit learning community made up of people who lead innovation within their organizations.

Danielle attended Targeted Innovation and Foundations in Leadership courses at the Center for Creative Leadership and is also a certified Foresight Practitioner by the Institute for the Future in Palo Alto. She is a graduate of the THINK School for Creative Leadership.

Danielle is passionate about catalyzing creativity and seeing the spark in people's eyes when they experience a shift in perspective and imagine new possibilities. She also loves to travel with her husband and two little girls. Exploring the world through their eyes shows her the future.
